How did this recognition of environmental rights come to pass? What are the rights of future generations? What does it mean for your community? What does it mean for other states? How can your community secure these protections?

Hear the story from a woman who helped make it happen: Maya K. van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper

The Delaware Riverkeeper and her organization, the Delaware Riverkeeper Network, have been advocates for environmental rights for 25 years and, in 2013, were lead plaintiffs, and the only environmental plaintiffs, that secured the state Supreme Court pronouncement and set a precedent with state, national and even worldwide implications.

Learn about the Delaware Riverkeeper Network’s Generations Project and get inspired to secure Constitutional Environmental Rights for your community – in Pennsylvania and beyond.

To schedule Maya van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper, to speak to your group, contact the Delaware Riverkeeper Network at keeper@delawareriverkeeper.org or call 215 369 1188, ext. 105.

Speaker fees vary based on event location, program duration and other resources available.