For Immediate Release
August 20, 2012

Contacts: Maya van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper 215-369-1188 x102 (rings cell & office)
Tracy Carluccio, Deputy Director, DRN (o) 215-369-1188 x104 (c) 215-692-2329

Television Ad on New York Cable TV Stations to Challenge Gas Drilling and Fracking, and to Spur Action

Bristol, PA – Delaware Riverkeeper Network (DRN) is placing a thirty second public awareness ad on cable television again this week seeking to break the gas and oil industry's grip on media advertising with a goal of raising awareness and spurring viewers to action. The ad will air from August 20 to 26 in regions of New York State underlain by shale gas deposits. A map and schedule is attached, showing the counties that will be covered out of cable TV stations headquartered in Binghamton, Elmira, Utica, and Sullivan County, primarily located in New York's Southern Tier and parts of the Catskills. The ad will air on MSNBC, HGTV, and Lifetime.

“In an effort to expose the terrible impacts of fracking and gas development infrastructure, Delaware Riverkeeper Network is investing in this creative effort to reach into the homes of New Yorkers to let them know the imminent dangers at hand and what they can do to influence what will happen,” said Maya van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper. “It’s unfair that the deep pockets of energy corporations allow them to dominate popular airwaves and as a result to overwhelm the public discourse with distortions and falsehoods. We don't have their money but with our limited resources, we're trying to break their media stranglehold and let people know they can do something about this,” added van Rossum.

For years, when the public heard about natural gas drilling and fracking, it was likely that they did so from the oil and gas industry through the ad campaigns of Exxon and Chesapeake, and industry lobbying groups like American Petroleum Institute and American Natural Gas Alliance. When it came to the TV airwaves, industry has enjoyed a virtual monopoly with campaigns that overwhelm solid, objective news reporting that critically analyzes the claims of industry.
The ad connects the viewer to a dedicated website www.frackattack.org where action alerts and videos are posted. This week’s airing will focus on the August 27 “Don’t Frack New York” Rally in Albany, NY, where thousands are planning to come together on the eve of a decision regarding whether New York’s fracking moratorium will be lifted to tell Governor Andrew Cuomo “Don’t Frack New York”.

Established in 1985 upon the appointment of the Delaware Riverkeeper, the Delaware Riverkeeper Network (DRN) is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) membership organization. DRN's professional staff and volunteers work throughout the entire Delaware River Watershed including portions of Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

###