Delaware Riverkeeper Network 8th Annual Craft Show Seeking New Crafters and Shoppers

New Hope, PA: The Delaware Riverkeeper Network is seeking new crafters for its 8th Annual Craft show taking place the weekend of December 11-12, 2010, at the Eagle Ballroom, Eagle Fire Company in New Hope, PA.

According to the Delaware Riverkeeper Network the holiday craft show is an opportunity to benefit the environment and local businesses -- allowing folks to shop from local artists and crafters while supporting the Delaware Riverkeeper Network.

According to the organization, the Delaware Riverkeeper Network's craft show highlights a wide variety of high quality, locally made handmade crafts, jewelry, wearable art, ceramics, wood, glass, mixed media, watercolors, oils, pastels, photography, and homemade chocolates.

"We like to introduce our community and members to our local crafters, and to support the local artisans that make our region special" says Tim White, the event's organizer. "This year we are securing a larger space for the show and so have more room for new crafters to join in this incredible opportunity to show and sell their work."

"Shopping at our craft show allows folks to reduce the amount of driving they have to do because we offer such great variety and quality in a single location" added Maya van Rossum, the
