Chico, CA – Sierra Nevada Brewing Co.—a pioneer in sustainability and craft brewing—announced today the launch of “Wild Rivers”. In its fourth year, Wild Rivers is a campaign dedicated to helping preserve vital waterways across the country.

For every 12-pack of Pale Ale and Sierra Nevada seasonal beer purchased in the U.S. from June 1 through July 7, Sierra Nevada will donate a portion of proceeds to river conservation-focused partners across the country, including the Delaware Riverkeeper Network, a non-profit based in Bristol, PA. This is the Delaware Riverkeeper Network’s second year as a “Wild Rivers” partner.

“Great water is essential to making great beer,” said Ken Grossman, Founder and President of Sierra Nevada Brewing Co. “We are committed to preserving natural waterways both in the Sierra Nevada that offer our inspiration, and across the nation.

“We measure the success of our business not only on the quality of our beer, but also our contribution to a healthy environment,” Grossman said.

The “Wild Rivers” partnership, which will be visible at retailers across the nation, aims to raise awareness and increase stewardship of rivers that sustain our communities and ecosystems. Since the program’s start in 2009, Sierra Nevada Brewing Co. has donated more than $250,000 to its partners to help preserve vital waterways across the country. A portion of these proceeds have supported Western Rivers Conservancy’s work to create parks and protected natural areas along rivers like the Klamath in California, the John Day in Oregon, the Hoh River in Washington, and the Gunnison River in Colorado.

“Sierra Nevada is known not only for its quality and integrity, but for the environmental stewardship trail they’ve blazed over the years,” said Maya K. van Ross, the Delaware Riverkeeper. “We are proud to partner with such a great company, and with the public’s help, we can ensure that the Delaware River and its tributary streams are given high priority in all decision-making because our mutual greatest good comes from the preservation of our Watershed’s natural resources.

Besides the Delaware Riverkeeper Network, the 2012 Wild Rivers campaign will support the Western Rivers Conservancy, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Ohio River Foundation, The River Project, and the Southeast Watershed Forum.
